

Guide to the First Fandom Experience Archive Index

November 24 2024

First Fandom Experience (FFE) is a collaborative publishing project that brings to life the history and impact of science fiction fandom. Our work can be seen here:

<https://firstfandomexperience.org/>

We focus on the early years of organized fandom, from the late 1920s through the mid-1940s. We hope to document this period as thoroughly as possible using artifacts created by early fans at the time – including fanzines, photographs and correspondence. In support of our research, we’ve assembled an extensive archive of this material. This document is the index to that archive.

The archive consists of both physical and digital assets. The physical assets are the collections of David Ritter and Alistair Durie, each accumulated over decades. Ritter acquired the entire Durie collection in 2023 and maintains it as a distinct resource.

The digital archive contains high-resolution scans of the Ritter and Durie collections, including fan material created through 1946. This is supplemented by contributions from several other private collections and material sourced from universities and other public archives. As of November 2024, the digital archive contains over 4,100 fanzine issues and approximately 200 other artifacts from early fan conventions and clubs. Our goal is to assemble the most comprehensive coverage possible dedicated to this particular timeframe. Others – most notably Fanac.org – have created archives that cover fan history through the current day.

We refer regularly to the Pavlat-Evans Fanzine Index (P&E, December 1952) to provide information on early material. Where our index differs from P&E, our information is generally based on inspection of the artifact – while understanding that dating and enumeration of fanzines was sometimes inaccurate at their origin.

Some columns in the archive index bear explanation:

Date	Based on inspection of the artifact. Where no date is present, we refer to P&E and/or to the content of the item
Source	When blank, indicates an item is either not found, or is physically present in the Ritter collection. “Durie” indicates a physical copy is held in the Durie collection. “Private” indicates a digital copy contributed from another private collection. Other entries designate a university or other public source for a digital copy (see below).
P (physical)	“Y” in this column indicates a physical copy is held in the Ritter collection.
D (digital)	“Y” in this column indicates a digital copy is held in the archive, regardless of source; “p” in this column signifies that the item is only partially scanned
Condition	“VG” here signifies a complete, readable artifact, even if it has some condition issues. Others as noted relative to this.

This iteration of the index covers fanzines, convention material, club miscellany and fiction chapbooks. Future releases will also list correspondence, photographs and other ephemera.

Inquiries regarding material in the archive should be sent to info@firstfandomexperience.org.

To fully conform to usage restrictions and citation rules, items from universities and other public archives should be acquired directly from those sources.
